KNOCK THE KAISER TO HIS KNEES

"WHEN the devil was sick the devil a monk would be; when the devil was well the devil a monk was he." This old quotation aptly describes the psychological condition of the kaiser as he contemplates his dreams of conquest and world-wide rapacity come to naught. He may call all the meetings he wants just to express his desire for popular government but that sort of thing will not go with those who have fought the battle of righteousness and hopelessness for almost five years. There must be no temporizing with the beast. Any clemency at this or other time would be to place the head of civilization in the jaws of the wild beast of the Apocalypse ready to devour the universe. The day has gone by when there can be any talk of settlements or compromise. Nothing remains but a war of extermination that the root of the evil may be torn out and cast to the winds that it may no longer propagate its evil seed. The war is won but this should not blind us to the fact that there is a big job of housecleaning ahead of the allied nations.

When you read in the Bonanza last night that the Americans had taken a section of the Hindenburg line consisting of endless cement lined galleries, bomb proof chambers, where they could house thousands of troops without thought of peril from the Niagara of bombs flying overhead, you must have also noted that the Yankees had a big job "mopping up" the premises. This mopping up process consists of entering each chamber and innermost recess with bombs and revolvers cocked ready for use against the treacherous Huns who would probably be found lying couchant in their lairs waiting with murderous thoughts for the approach of the allied squads engaged in seeking out the cowardly remnants of the kaiser's crew. Experience has shown that such "mopping up" parties have a dangerous mission in descending to the cavernous depths of the bomb proof and rooting out the occupants. The process can only be likened to a trapper insinuating himself in a den of death-dealing adders whose venomous fangs were itching for a chance to resent the intrusion. This "mopping up" practice must be applied to the entire system of the imperial Prussian hosts until nothing remains of the enemies of civilization and the world is made safe for future generations.

There cannot be any peace where there is such horrible crime to punish. There is no condoning the offenses which have accumulated during all this horrible war which is so crammed full of inexpressible mountainous iniquity that reparation is as impossible as repentance from the damned souls of hell.

There must not be any peace talk. If you should encounter a fiend in your household who has entered under the cover of darkness and then slaughtered your wife and family you would not feel impelled to negotiate peace while his hands still reeked with your beloved ones. You would demand the blood atonement as an expiation of the demoniacal destruction. And the world would applaud your act in exacting the most barbarous penalty even to torture.

These thoughts are suggested by the suggestions already whispered around the streets of Tonopah that the allies should accept the olive branch extended by the kaiser or his bloodstained consorts in crime. It is well enough for mollycoddles to say we should be chivalrous but the law of nations on which chivalrous warfare is conducted has been outraged every minute since the millions of the kaiser's armed men were set in motion towards the Belgian frontier. There cannot be any peace. This must be a war of extermination for the German people have demonstrated that they know not the meaning of freedom. The nation cannot understand the word. The Germans support their bloodthirsty rulers and rejoice in the loot of nations. When they are utterly destroyed on the field of battle the world will have a just and honorable peace and not before. To parley with Germany is to parley with the devil and it is America's duty to make victory final and complete.

LOOKING FOR ANOTHER JOB

SINCE the rabid foaming at the mouth Prohibitionists see the passing of the liquor traffic we may expect them to turn Crusader in some other direction with a vent hole for the oratory and a receptacle for the generous bank roll that always arouses the enthusiasm of such spellbinders. The man who denies his neighbor the satisfaction of indulging in a refreshing glass of beer will probably be ready to tackle the iniquity of tobacco before the boys come home from the trenches. The roll of long green is vanishing and a new evil must be erected in place of the foaming goblet that the army of long-haired spouters may be kept in action. For some time past there have been indications of an eruption in the direction of the shrine of our Lady Nicotine whose mollifying influence does not meet with the approval of the tribe which seeks to deprive mankind of every comfort to alleviate the hardships of existence. The mere fact that our boys on the battlefield crave the solace of the soothing cigarette and that millions find comfort in the little paper rolls calls for sending out the clarion cry of reform to the end that the country may be cursed with a campaign headed by these philandering neurotics to banish the weed from our daily life. It is coming as sure as the winter gives way to spring and the flowers succeed snow and we might as well get ready to make bonfires of our dearly beloved old black briars, the amber coated meerschaum and the old fashioned clay pipe of our daddies not to say the tranquillizing sack of makings.

Bulgaria, true to its cowardly nature, wants the allies to back it up against the Turk for a fight to a finish. This is another phase of the big brother movement by which the small boy will tackle the bully of the block. But the big brother must be in sight to see that the other fellow does not get the best of it.

Now they say that the art of camouflage was born in Mexico. In this part of the world the only man who could not recognize a Mexican is one wearing a gas mask.

Our good friend the Bulgar who has been fighting the Turks for a thousand years sees an opportunity to make a good job of it by subletting the contract to the allies.

The Democratic candidate for re-election as superintendent of public instruction had the faculty of taking care of his own relatives regardless of how many taxpayers' daughters go schoolless.

The kaiser may be preparing to take a running jump at himself.

When the Hun learns to eat out of our hands it will be time to talk settlements.

Foch shows less concern these days about starting a new drive than he did a year ago about ordering a glass of wine.

Chile has seen a strong white light and brought itself to the point of seizing the Teuton merchant ships in her harbors.

SPEEDING UP FIGHT MACHINERY TO SHORTEN UP HOSTILITIES

(Correspondence Associated Press)

BEHIND BRITISH LINES IN FRANCE, Sept. 18.—Increasing speed of fire and ever swifter assaults and maneuver have been the principal developments of the art of war this year. A year ago an attack was a lumbering ponderous thing, moving along heavily and deliberately behind a great weight of artillery preparation. Today speed is the thing. The rate of advance in the British army has been increased four-fold in the past year.

Behind the screen of swift-moving tanks, armored motor cars and cavalry, the assault divisions rush into the German positions, occupying trenches, stamping out isolated nests of resistance and collecting the masses of prisoners. The infantry necessarily move more slowly than the mobile assault forces, but when one takes into account the width of the usual thrust operation nowadays and its depth, the movement is wonderfully fast, and a day's operations, if successful, mean the occupation of many square miles of territory.

In particular, speed has been applied to the movement of artillery, which is the vital thing in holding the positions won. Mechanical improvements have been applied to gun tractors so that now guns can be brought up in a quarter of the time that was necessary a few months ago. In the same way the tank has become a mobile gun battery, able to fire as it advances.

Motor transport is the essential factor in concentrating infantry. Food, ammunition, water and all supplies are carried up in motor trucks.

As fast as the line moves, the engineers are busy extending the light railways, and as fast as the rails are laid, they begin to carry their burden of supplies and ammunition. Many miles of track can now be laid by a single section of engineers in a day, and by the evening

HOLLAND HAS WOMAN MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT

(By Associated Press) AMSTERDAM, Oct. 2.—Miss Susanah Groeneweg, Holland's first and only woman member of parliament, was a school teacher and is a recognized authority on school questions. In 1903 Miss Groeneweg joined the Social Democratic Labor party, and soon became one of its militant members. In 1914 she became a member of the party's executive. Miss Groeneweg is one of the deputies for the city of Rotterdam.

CHINESE ADMIRE GENERAL FOCH

(By Associated Press)

PEKING, Oct. 2.—China has been impressed by the success of General Foch's counter offensive and by the American successes on the western front. Hitherto the Chinese have been very much overawed by Germany, which most of them considered invincible. Now a change has taken place which is reflected in the Peking press.

The Minhsinpuo urges the central powers to make peace with the allies and says the defeats of the Austrian and German armies in Italy and France show clearly that a complete military victory over the entente is impossible especially now that the young American army has proved itself capable of attacking the experienced German troops with victory.

Previous to this Franco-American victory in France, the majority of the Chinese people, especially Chinese military officers, most of whom had been trained in Germany and Japan or educated in China under German and Japanese military instructors, expressed great doubt about the ability of the "inexperienced Americans" to combat successfully the Germans on the western front.

Now the Franco-American victory has shown the intelligent class of Chinese what the American army can do. This raises the prestige of the American in the far east as a military people.
